

OVERVIEW The Panasas® Parallel Storage Cluster is the premier storage system for scalable Linux clusters. Built on an object-based storage clustering architecture, Panasas delivers exceptional scaling in capacity and performance while extending appliance-like ease of management to a virtually boundless storage system. Panasas targets high-performance computing applications using Linux clusters. Government sciences, oil & gas, life sciences, media rendering and emerging commercial uses of Linux clusters are the initial vertical segments.

FOUNDED Panasas was founded in 1999 and is privately owned.

INVESTORS Carlyle Venture Partners, Centennial Ventures, Mohr, Davidow Ventures, Evercore Limited Partner, Goldman Sachs, Intel Capital and Novak-Biddle Venture Partners.

PRODUCTS The Panasas Parallel Storage Cluster is designed from the ground up to radically boost storage performance and enhance manageability. It is the first storage solution optimized for Linux cluster environments. The groundbreaking Panasas PanFS™ Parallel File System heralds a next-generation, object-based storage clustering architecture. This, combined with cost-effective smart hardware components – Panasas StorageBlade® Modules and Panasas DirectorBlade® Modules – delivers record-breaking performance in both throughput and random I/O. It is all managed within a single, seamless namespace that can easily grow from gigabytes to petabytes.
